

Repeats
Barb Jones
he

We could approach her at any time.

Johnson: What was the length of time for which she contacted you life?

Bethune: She remained there continuously after that.

Johnson: Tell about your own life as a student.

Bethune: I was always considered a very earnest, cooperative student, with the teachers and with my class-mates. I was not always the best in the class, but I was never the worst. Was always proclaimed as the leader. I don't know why, but always was the captain of this or the chairman of that. If it was a little base-ball team, I was the captain, or if it was a committee, I was the chairman. My word was always accepted for their decisions -- I don't know why. I think it was because I loved them all and would always try to conduct myself so they would always love and respect me. I always felt that if we give out love and respect, we would get it. I feel that today.

( Early childhood associations in school which you felt influence your life, or vice-versa)

I have always been a pretty good mixer. I could be influenced by some of the things that were good and some of the things that were not so good. I was normal in this respect. I have by no means been a perfect child in school, but could so soon find my mistake and always had will power enough to retrace my steps toward the safe side of life. Some of the girls, of course, who had so much better homes and clothing and what they called influential family ties that I so very much desired. But I never permitted myself to become antagonistic and dislike them because of that, but bided my time and felt that some day I, like they would have them. I used to pass the girls' houses sometimes and wish I lived in a house like that-- it might be just a weatherboard house, or... I realized that I lived in a log-cabin, a log-house, but I felt that some day would come, if I studied and worked; and so, the first thing I did when I was able to earn my own money, was to tear down the

School

Where Mr B sits at the head of the table
Baseball!

School
School

ella

Barb Jones